CHILD MARRIAGE

STATISTICAL INFORMATION

- Globally 36% of women aged 20-24 were married or in union before age 18.¹
- School dropout rate is higher for girls with early marriage.¹
- Approximately 14 million adolescents between ages 16-19 give birth each year. Serious medical consequences for pregnancies that result from early marriage are: obstetric fistula, low birth for the child and sometimes even death for the mother and/or child.¹

1. Changing Attitudes: Addressing parental attitudes and societal customs that promote or condone the practice of child marriage is vital to change. Communication campaigns help to create circumstances in which traditional attitudes can be discussed and examined on the local level.¹ It is important to empower girls and help them taking their own decisions regarding education, marriage and choosing life partners.
   UNICEF addresses the practice or early of forced marriage by working with governments to change and enforce laws. More importantly, UNICEF works directly with communities and families, to help them change their own views. By focusing on positive messages and using local leaders, UNICEF is convincing entire communities to abandon the practice of child marriage.
   http://www.care.org/campaigns/childmarriage/index.asp in Ethiopia, community organizations, parents, and tribal and religious leaders have already mobilized to amend the law to outlaw child marriage.

2. Prevention: Cash transfer programs are directed to girls, keeping them in school: Yemen, Brazil, Turkey, Mexico, Jamaica, Haiti, Bangladesh, Nigeria, Uganda, Peru.²
   Education is key - http://www.pbs.org/now/shows/341/facts.html
   - Girls with a secondary education are up to six times less likely to marry young compared to girls with little or no education.
   - Education delays the age at which a girl or young woman marries.
   - Education provides an alternative opportunity for girls other than marriage.
   - Education increases socio-economic status and learning potential for girls

3. Laws and Policy: Although the minimum legal age for marriage in most countries is 18, the implementation of these laws is often ignored in favor of common practice, consideration of short term economic needs, and what is seen as the "physical protection of the girl", particularly in conflict areas. Recognition and punishment of men who kidnap girls can avoid forced marriage. Law enforcement and court official trainings promote this avoidance of forced marriage.

4. Resources: Plan International, Because I am a Girl (annual publications)
   Coalition for Adolescent Girls, Girls Count series

5. Monitoring and Evaluation: Birth Registration is essential to prevention of child marriage, since it confirms a girl's age and thus it is more difficult to circumvent federal and state laws.

6. Gender Inequality: are key determinants of health status. "Each year approximately 14 million adolescent girls give birth, the majority of which occur in developing countries. Pregnancy and childbirth related complications are the number one killers of girls aged 16-19."

7. Role of men and boys: One example: Sisters of Notre Dame in Patna, India are beginning a program for adolescents in the schools which will work at changing prevailing perceptions of customs which do violence to girls.

8. Regional Framework: Africa, Asia, Central America:

9. UN Roles: Use of the two Conventions, CEDAW (Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Woman) and CRC (Convention on the Rights of the Child) provide excellent opportunities to expose harmful practices such as early or forced marriage.
